College of Education & Human Development

Making a difference…

UD’s College of Education and Human Development (CEHD) is dedicated to developing solutions to the problems faced by children and the challenges encountered by teachers, youth and families around the world.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

UD's College of Education and Human Development (CEHD) is dedicated to developing solutions to the problems faced by children and the challenges encountered by teachers, youth and families around the world. Through practice and research, researchers and community members, we educate our students, engage in solution-driven research and provide services to the community to ensure that our citizens receive a high-quality education and vital social services. This is how we help to make a difference.

TEACHER PREPARATION

CEHD prepares students for careers in early childhood education, elementary teacher education and human services. To ensure that they can apply the knowledge and skills they acquire, our students gain valuable hands-on experience within schools, service organizations and agencies across the region. Our pre-service high standards, provides essential training and produces graduates who are prepared to become effective educators.

TEACHER PREPARATION

Students enrolled in our teacher education programs had an average high school grade point average (GPA) of 3.4 and combined SAT scores averaging over 1700.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Today’s educators are responsible for meeting a growing list of demands: improving educational outcomes, adopting evidence-based practices, developing strategies to engage an increasingly diverse population of students, implementing curricula and programs that meet the needs of each school.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Our faculty and students are dedicated to preparing excellent teachers and support inclusive classrooms for students with intellectual disabilities.

RESEARCH

How can we improve the education of children and reduce the number of students who are struggling? CEHD faculty and students work to develop solutions and implement new approaches to these challenges.

RESEARCH

Dedicated to solving 21st century challenges, our researchers are investigating the impact of innovative interventions, the development of infant language and the skills that educators need to become effective school leaders.
